Drug raid nets two

A quantity of marijuana and hashish with a street value of more than $500,000 was seized in a raid last Thursday of a house just north of Kinmount.

Nicholas George, 46, and his wife Patricia, 42, are charged with numerous drug and firearm offences as a result of the raid, which involved the Metro Toronto 3 District Drug Unit and officers from OPP Detachments in Minden, Peterborough and Cobocok.

George is the owner of a Minden business called The Cobbler.

During the investigation, officers raided a house on Highway 121 and discovered an elaborate hydroponic cultivation system for marijuana plants. The system is capable of bringing the plants from seed to harvest in about one month, police report. It could produce up to 2,000 marijuana plants per year. There were more than 100 plants being cultivated at the time of the raid.

In addition to the drugs, police seized numerous shotguns, rifles and handguns in the raid.

The search warrant was obtained by the Metro Drug Unit. The investigation is continuing.

Cottagers unite to combat council

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

An umbrella group of cottagers in Minden is being formed in response to concerns about some of the policies being pursued by Minden Council.

Gary Kapac, president of the Canning Lake Cottager's Association, announced the formation of the "super association" at the first annual meeting of the Lake Kashagawigamog Association on September 2.

The new group will be made up of the presidents of the various cottage associations in Anson, Hindon and Minden, and Kapac says they are considering running a slate of cottagers in the next municipal election.

"We're concerned about the local politicians," Kapac said. "There's a lot of money to be made in development, and we're not sure the local politicians have the same interest in the lake environment as we do."

Kapac identified some of the key issues that concern cottage associations in Minden.

Topping the list is concerns about Minden council allowing property to be rezoned to industrial within half a mile from Canning Lake.

Council approved a rezoning application for North Steel, a steel fabrication business owned by Hans Walter. Kapac said his association collected 400 names on a petition objecting to the rezoning and they are taking the matter to a hearing of the Ontario Municipal Board to be held on November 30.

The Canning Lake property owners want to see a proper industrial park in the township and not have industrial development take place within half a mile of the lake, "by default," Kapac said.

Kapac also said the cottage associations are concerned with back-lot development and what it could mean to lake environments in the township.

Concern about back-lot development, and Minden council, also came from Jean Anthon, president of the Federation of Ontario Cottage Associations (FOCA). Anthon applauded the formation of the super association in Minden township and said council would be in for a "major challenge" if they attempt to alter the setback for back-lot development to anything less than 1,000 feet.

SPACE INVADERS?

He is sandblasting the side of the Highlander steam locomotive, next to HHSS in Haliburton. Turning the tables

This may seem a little far fetched, but imagine what life would be like if a group of Minden residents bought property in Toronto and successfully ran for city council in the next municipal election. Let's take a look into the future and see:

Since the election of 1991, more and more Minden residents have been travelling to Toronto each weekend to take advantage of all the new services put in place by city council to meet their specific desires.

The slate of Minden residents which took control of city council after that election has certainly made some changes for the better. The new subway network that escorts us from convenient locations at the fringe of the city to all the major attractions is a feather in the cap of Mayor Ray Moore. His idea of dismantling the TTC to come up with the funding for the subway was ingenious. After all, what use is the TTC to us Minden residents?

We can thank Alderman Bob Sisson for the box seats at the SkyDome, paid for with the savings from the cutbacks in police staff. Alderman Lewis Stevens' plan to demolish all the homes on Toronto Island and convert it into a theme park has won unanimous support of council and work is scheduled to begin next month.

The clean-up of the Don River is progressing well now that all the factories along this waterway have been shut down. The retraining program for the out-of-work employees is a big success and most will have jobs as cashiers, waiters and bus-boys when the Toronto Island theme park is completed.

Recreational boating in the Toronto Harbour has been a popular pastime with visitors since all commercial shipping was outlawed last year. As predicted by council, the number of dockworkers manning the picket lines dwindles each day as they come to appreciate the significance of this bold initiative.

The number of complaints from city residents has also dwindled since Mayor Moore and council altered the office hours at city hall. The office is now open every Saturday during the summer months and every fourth Saturday in the winter. Because of difficult driving conditions in the winter, though, attendance at the winter council meetings is optional.

Of course it's inconceivable that a slate of Minden residents could get enough support to win an election in Toronto. However, the reverse is possible. In fact, it's already being planned.

Some cottagers who feel Minden would be a better place if it was run by cottagers suggested last week that they would like to run a slate of candidates in the next municipal election here. Since year-round residents in Minden are outnumbered by about four to one, they have a chance of succeeding.

Cottagers and residents alike should seriously consider what this group is proposing. They're not talking about running as individuals with a concern for the community. They're talking of entering a slate of like-minded seasonal residents to address their specific desires. If they are successful, the results will be disastrous.

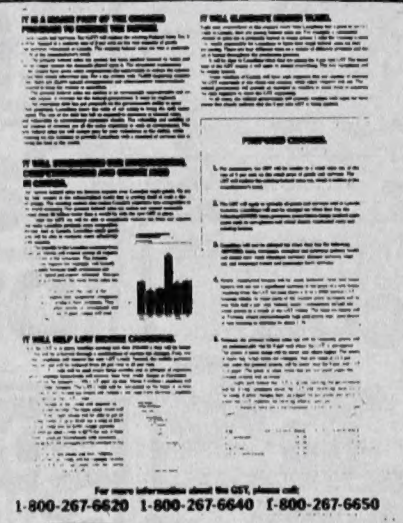

There are many cottagers in Minden who would make excellent council members and should be encouraged to run in the next election. However, the concept of running a slate of candidates from any special interest group is both confrontational and destructive.

Bradamore replies to letter

Editor:

In response to the article in the Minden Times on Monday, August 21, 1989.

I would like to start off by saying I had a lot of respect for Councillor Lewis Stevens and I like him as a person and I felt he was for potential growth of the community. After I was fired I was asked by Al Hudson if he could see me in his office. I said yes. When I went to his office and sat down, he explained he did not like my comments in the paper regarding Councillor Lewis Stevens and demanded I print a retraction, or he would go to the paper and demand one. I told him, "You do whatever you have to do, Al, because I never said anything wrong and I don't like being threatened, so you do whatever you think you have to do."

I am not denying the fact that Councillor Lewis Stevens declared a conflict of interest to Council or at the Planning Advisory Committee. However, I guess the part I got confused as far as he was concerned as a developer was his direct involvement with me during the course of events necessary to gain approval for such a development. I apologize if you do not feel this is a developer.

At no time did I ever say that Reeve Ray Moore did not declare a conflict of interest on his proposed development. I have a lot of respect for Ray Moore and I feel if more people would listen to him about development, Minden would be better off. As far as I am concerned,

'How could I be any different?' Bradamore asks rumors about Ray Moore not being concerned about the environment are false. All he ever tried to do, in my opinion, is to be flexible and have proper development and be open to new ideas.

The point I was trying to get across in the August 14 issue of The Times was how could I be any different from Lewis Stevens, (Al Hudson M.M.A.S. development) and Ray Moore projects or Planning Advisory Committee members who made an application to the Committee for approval. All I am asking is, what is the difference?

I was really upset when I read that Mr. Hudson said he came to my office several times to discuss his site plan.

However, what he forgot to mention is at his request, or Councillor Lewis Stevens' request, I went and reviewed the drawings with him or them regarding their development at their office. I was shocked that Mr. Hudson would mislead the public that he could only get my attention for two minutes to talk about his project because I spent more time helping them on their project than any other project I had to work on. I believe one time when Mr. Hudson was in my office, other people wanted to see me and the phone rang and I maybe answered the call and he was upset that I didn't tell the ladies in the office I could not be disturbed for any reason because I want to give Mr. Hudson my undivided attention. Anyone that was ever in my office knows that this happened to me frequently and if you felt I broke my concentration on your project to help someone else and you feel I should have given you more attention and concentration, I apologize for that.

Also, I don't remember talking to you about any problems about Mount Minden, the Council, P.A.C. Committee or a law suit, unless it was at your office at lunch time, a break or after hours. And it would be only to answer all your questions as politely as possible. I am sure the public is not misguided enough to think that I used you for guidance and wisdom to deal with all fundamentals and problems that may arise within municipal government.

Also, I would like to reply to your comments that you had to stop in the middle of your conversation to see if I was listening and I apparently said, "No, sorry, I was thinking about something else." This gives the impression to the public that I am a total airhead. I believe I am far from that and anyone who has dealt with me knows I am not like that. Al, you have a tendency to tell people what they are going to do instead of asking them. What was I trying to do was figure how I was going to let you down gently and politely and I felt I was always thinking on how to do this with you. And as you can see, I guess I must have been unsuccessful as far as you are concerned because you are an unhappy customer. I would have preferred you keep your personal comments out of the paper and I would have kept mine out. However, when you back someone into a corner they come out fighting. I don't believe I openly said Council does not know what they are doing. I believe I was asked what Council would do in regards to culverts, etc., and I said, Council may not be knowledgeable in that field and would rely on the Engineers, Road Superintendent or my advice. I believe some of my comments are twisted a bit or misinterpreted; however, Mr. Hudson, or anyone else, should remember there are two sides to any story and read Mr. Hudson's side and make up your own minds. It sure portrays the image that I am a dummy, which most people know I'm not and I am not saying you are either, Mr. Hudson. All I see is an angry man that did not get his way. I am sorry if you feel this way.

The most ironic part of the whole article is that you were the first person to call me and tell me you were sorry, for what had happened outside of my family, and you offered me a job with Prudential Insurance and offered to take me down to Toronto to enroll me because of my personality and ambition. Who would want someone that supposedly lost a company $14,000 over a site plan agreement? Did you just offer me this job when you may have lost your concentration or is it out of retaliation of the August 14 newspaper article? It appears I went from Mr. Potential Prudential to Mr. Scum Bucket, for what reason I don't know!

However, I would like the people to know of an agreement that was proposed at a public meeting in the Council Chambers on or about April 18 about the Dollo IGA road. Mr. Berry was against this because of the one foot reserve. However, on August 9 he was for taking over the road and leaving the one-foot reserve on the road and spending $5,000 for culverts to assist your development and Councillor Lewis Stevens'. They could have had this done for nothing and properly expanded the town. It is ironic that this agreement matured the night before I got fired. This and other reasons are why I have no respect for Bern Berry. You always led me to believe that he was not your favorite person either, but you are portraying him as your long lost buddy. I wonder why?

Also in your site plan agreement you said I advised your Architect of an incorrect setback that cost you $14,000. I think the facts are that I told you what the setbacks are for the municipality and your proposal exceeded those setbacks. I talked to Joe Lynch from M.T.O. in Huntsville and he indicated on face value probably a 45-foot setback from the highway and a one-foot reserve would be required. However, an application for a building and land use permit would be required. I helped Lewis Steven fill out that form and it was sent to Huntsville for approval by M.T.O. When final plans were submitted to M.T.O. it was observed that it did not meet their criteria and further setbacks were required. I believe the onus is on you to obtain M.T.O. approval before a permit is issued.

Brad Bradamore,

It's the least we can do

black 'n white

by Arthur Black

Consider the Goodyear Blimp.

I don't mean the craft itself in all its bulbous majesty. I'm talking about that name emblazoned upon its whale-like carcass.

GOODYEAR

Sure, it stands for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio. But they took it from a remarkable 19th Century inventor by the name of Charles Goodyear who, though a bit of a certifiable nutbar in real life, changed your life in thousands of ways.

Charlie, you see, invented rubber. Well, that's wrong. Mother Nature invented rubber -- it's sap of various tropical plants, particularly the wild rubber tree. Humans have been fascinated by natural rubber for centuries. Ancient Egyptians amused themselves by bouncing gobs of the stuff off the flanks of the Sphinx. Back in the 1700's scientists fooled around with the idea of "rubberizing" clothing. They made such things as rubber-coated leather boots and capes to take advantage of its water-shedding abilities.

The rubber-coated articles worked swell -- at room temperature.

As soon as they got cold, the natural rubber turned as brittle as a Margaret Thatcher smile. The heat of a summer day reduced natural rubber to a glob of oleaginous goop.

Enter a Connecticut Yankee by the name of Charles Goodyear.

Charlie too, was obsessed with the potential of "India rubber" as it was called. In the early years of the 1900's he conducted hundred of experiments, searching for some chemical or combination of chemicals that would render the gooey sap into a stable compound that could withstand extremes of temperature. On a chilly winter evening in 1839 a weary Charlie Goodyear finished off another day of useless experimentation. This time he'd been trying to combine native rubber with sulphur. No luck. Dejectedly, he brushed his hands over a wood stove. Bits of rubber and crumbs of sulphur danced on the hot stove lid. Suddenly bits of the rubber and flakes of sulphur came together and congealed to form a kind of blob that -- miracle of miracles -- was not melting on the stove lid! Eagerly Charlie Goodyear scraped off the blob, allowed it to cool, then took it outside and nailed it to the kitchen door to see how it would survive the severe cold of a winter's night. The next morning he found the blob still hanging on the nail, still pliable. Charlie Goodyear had just invented vulcanization, the process that would turn relatively useless rubber into millions of essential products.

And that should have been the traditional Hollywood fadeout: a long shot of smiling Charlie Goodyear standing by his kitchen door, a slab of the world's first morsel of vulcanized rubber in his hand, looking forward to a future of fame and riches.

Alas, life seldom takes its cues from Hollywood. The rest of the world wasn't nearly as thrilled with vulcanized rubber as Charlie was. His discovery was met with massive public indifference. Folks couldn't figure out why Charlie got so excited about this "vegetable leather" as he called it.

And he did get excited. Charlie was to rubber as Don Cherry is to goon hockey. He boosted the potential of vulcanized rubber tirelessly, night and day, to anyone who would listen. Charlie even took to walking around in a three-piece rubberized suit to demonstrate the versatility of his invention.

Eventually of course he made his point, but not before he carved himself an image as a megalomaniacal wierdo. And not before other American opportunists glommed on to his idea and claimed the invention as their own. Today, rubber is a multi-million dollar industry. Many a tycoon made his fortune in rubber, but not Charlie Goodyear. He spend his last years embroiled in costly court battles, fending off patent infringements. Charlie Goodyear's discovery has given us everything from beach balls to moon buggy tires, from whoopie cushions to artificial hearts. But it didn't do much for Charlie Goodyear. He died in 1860, exhausted and a pauper.

Seems like putting his name on a blimp and flying it over the Super Bowl is the very least we can do.

Japan's not all that Misti had imagined

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Misti Campbell says she went to Japan to learn about the culture. In many ways the experience wasn't what she imagined it would be.

Campbell lived in Japan for a year as part of the Rotary Exchange program and returned to Canada on August 24. Her experiences included learning the language, eating live seafood and trying to adjust to a culture which differs dramatically from ours.

"Before I left I told myself not to expect anything and to keep an open mind," says Campbell. "But I lied to myself. They're really different from Canadians."

"At first I took some of the things negatively, but after a while I changed my ideas and realized it wasn't bad, it was just their way of doing things."

"It's not a bad country, it's a different country."

One of the characteristics of the Japanese people that Campbell found most difficult to deal with is their restrained manner and subtle, or non-existent, display of emotion.

"Before I left I used to be able to read people's emotions," she says. But the Japanese are so restrained. Campbell found it difficult to tell what they were thinking or how they were feeling. This made it hard for her to tell whether she was being accepted by the people she met because she didn't get any feedback, positive or negative, from her actions. "It's hard to correct yourself if you're not sure you're doing something wrong."

Campbell lived with four different host families in Japan's second largest city, Osaka, on the south-east side of the island.

She attended a prominent Japanese school that had a student population consisting of 1,200 boys and only 300 girls.

Communication was a problem during the first part of her stay because her host families were trying to encourage Campbell to learn the Japanese language so they avoided speaking English to her. She soon caught on, though, and by the end of her trip was functioning fairly well speaking and writing in Japanese.

"I even dream in Japanese, and they say that's a good sign that you've learned a language," she says. Campbell has become so used to having to rely on her Japanese that she sometimes has to stop and try and think of the English word she wants to use. "I'm still thinking in Japanese."

Campbell isn't really concerned that she might lose her proficiency in the language now that she doesn't have much opportunity to use it. "I didn't go over to learn the language to keep for the rest of my life, I went to learn the culture. But if I can keep it up I'd like to."

She recently had the opportunity to practice her Japanese with Noriko Yonei the Japanese exchange student who is staying with Stanhope's Ann Barker.

As well, Campbell still has some books in Japanese to read and says she will keep in touch with some of the people she met by writing letters.

She admits that having Japanese as a second language will be "unique" and will come in handy when she pursues her plan to work on Canada's west coast, which has a large Japanese population.

Japanese food was 'interesting', says Misti Campbell, who learned to enjoy sushi.

Campbell says the food she ate while living in Japan was "interesting" but good once she got used to the texture. She says she fell in love with sushi (raw fish) during her stay.

Among the more exotic dishes she was served were squid and baby octopus which are eaten while they are still alive. She says it took some courage to eat food that wasn't dead.

One of the things that struck Campbell was the high cost of living. She says during the winter a single cantaloupe can cost the equivalent of $30 and a pair of jeans can go for as much as $100.

The visit provided Campbell with the opportunity to travel throughout Japan. Because of the limited amount of land and the high population, she says there is no wasted space.

Land use in Japan can be divided into three categories, says Campbell, cities, with tightly squeezed buildings and houses, cemeteries, and rice fields. "There is no unused land."

Campbell's house in Minden occupies the same space as four houses in Japan, she says.

Because of the limited space, Campbell

says the Japanese people have a keen appreciation of nature. Houses don't have lawns but instead have beautifully kept flower gardens.

When she first got to Japan, Campbell says she couldn't understand the pre-occupation with flower gardens. But after living there a while she came to understand the need to cherish natural beauty. "I realized that I took nature for granted because in Canada, we are surrounded by it."

Although short on space, Campbell found that Japan still has some scenic wonders to offer. She described Mount Fuji as being, "more beautiful than in the pictures," and says while Japan does not have nearly as many lakes as we do, the ones they have are well cared for and treasured.

However, not all of Campbell's experiences and impressions of Japan are positive. As to be expected from any person who is immersed in a culture vastly different from her own, Campbell found some of the aspects of Japanese life, difficult, or impossible, to accept.

She found that women don't enjoy the same equality in Japan as they do in Canada, although members of Japan's younger generations are striving to effect change. The country had national elections while Campbell was over there, and she says one member of the government lost his seat by saying that the woman's place was in the house.

While the younger members of the society are "making their move," according to Campbell, the older generation still clings to values and traditions that a 17-year-old from Minden found hard to accept.

"It made it hard to deal with the older generation, because I didn't believe in what they believed in," says Campbell. But instead of letting the differences cause problems, Campbell says she "worked with it."

Because Japanese students are so dedicated to their school work and extra-curricular activities, Campbell says they didn't want to go out and see the town. "They don't party like Canadians party," she says.

Smoking and drinking were the two activities which a lot of Japanese young people seemed to want to do, says Campbell. And she found this annoying because she wanted to go out and see new things and places. Eventually Campbell made friends with other foreign visitors in Japan who shared her interest in sightseeing and exploring.

Given the high population density in Japan's cities, there is not much chance of enjoying any privacy, and Campbell says she missed the opportunity to enjoy some peaceful time by herself. "I couldn't just walk down the street talking to myself, without someone hearing," she says. "If I felt like sitting quietly by myself someplace, I couldn't do it because the house was always busy."

Campbell also found that the Japanese frown upon a person being idle and inactive. "If you're not doing anything they get frustrated. They think a person should be busy every moment. They go all the time."

In order to make the best possible use of their busy days, Campbell says the Japanese plan every moment and every activity and don't exhibit much spontaneity.

Near the end of her trip Campbell and some friends went to the Disney Land in Tokyo. The Japanese boy in their group began planning their schedule for their entire day including what transportation they would use and what attractions they would visit. But Campbell said because this was her last trip, she wanted to "go with the flow," and enjoy the day's events as they unfolded.

Campbell says the boy found not knowing what was going to happen next "very frustrating" but as the day progressed he began to relax a little. "If they don't have something to do, they're lost," she says.

Throughout her trip, Campbell was constantly aware that, as a foreigner, she was something of a curiosity to the Japanese people. She says she was uncomfortable with always being the focus of attention wherever she went. "I hated being a show-and-tell object," she says. Whenever she was brought among a group of strangers, she was bombarded with "a million questions." And the Japanese were very conscious of the style of Campbell's hair and clothing. "They analysed me to pieces," she says, and didn't hesitate to criticize those aspects they found disagreeable. "It was kind of annoying."

Despite all she learned from her experiences, Campbell says she came home with even more questions about the Japanese people and culture. She thinks the trip made her grow as a person and says friends have noticed a change in her personality.

Before she left she was very expressive and open with her emotions, but after living in Japan for a year, she has become more reserved.

"It's hard to get back into the 'Canadian' way of acting and doing things," she says.

Protection of lake is top issue among residents

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The most important issue facing property owners on Lake Kashagawigamog is protection of the lake environment.

The results of a survey conducted by the executive of the new property owner's association indicates that members place more importance on water quality and pollution than on boater safety, marine speed limits and house boats.

A survey was distributed among the members, asking them to rate in terms of importance 22 issues facing lakefront property owners. Environmental concerns topped the list.

Glen Carter presented the members with the results of the survey and said septic system control and weed and algae build-up were the two issues given the most importance.

Other environmental issues such as declining water clarity, the proposed sewage plant expansion, acid rain and defoliation, dredging of wetlands, oil and gas pollution and fertilizer runoff were also areas of concern.

Lakefront re-zoning and commercial expansion were the two other issues that rounded out the 10 most important issues.

In response to the members' concerns, the executive proposed two resolutions dealing with septic system control.

The first resolution called for a request to be made to the Ministry of the Environment to carry out an inspection of all septic systems on the lake.

Despite the overwhelming support the resolution was given, the members were told that there were 40 lakes already in line for the inspections, and at a testing rate of five lakes a year, it could be eight years before Lake Kashagawigamog's turn comes up.

The second resolution, which was also passed, approved in principle the concept of having septic systems inspected and certified by the Health Unit as a condition of property resale.

Gary Kapac, President of the Canning Lake Cottage Association, told the Kashagawigamog property owners that the septic systems on his lake were finally tested this spring, "after four years of hounding the Ministry of the Environment."

Of the 280 properties tested, Kapac said 12 septic systems were found to be direct polluters with no effluent treatment, 70 were found to be indirect pol-

Bancroft man charged in Harcourt murder

A Bancroft man has been charged with first degree murder in the death of Highland Grove resident Fred Harvey, whose body was found near Harcourt on August 30.

Lloyd Morrow, 28, was arrested and charged on September 5 following an investigation by OPP officers from Minden, Peterborough and Toronto.

Harvey's body was found partially buried in a wooded area near Harcourt by an unidentified area resident. A post-mortem, conducted on September 1, revealed that Harvey's death was the result of gun-shot wounds.

Morrow appeared in Provincial Court in Lindsay last week and was remanded in custody until this Thursday when a trial date will be set.

Trent-Severn Waterway Report

Haliburton Area Lakes have declined 4.9 per cent to 54.2 per cent of their full levels, as of August 28, 1989. This loss is average for this time of the year. Outflows from Haliburton to the Kawartha Lakes are at the minimum discharges allowed and will very likely remain so for the next couple of weeks.

The effects of lower losses due to evaporation and heavier precipitation amounts in recent thunderstorms is responsible for the levels of most Kawartha Lakes rising to near the top of their navigation ranges. If the wetter weather continues, flow increases will be made on the Otonabee River.

Two-year delay in store for sewer line

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The request to have Dysart's proposed sewage treatment plant expansion "bumped up" to an individual environmental assessment could delay the project for up to two years, according to Ministry of Environment sources.

The request for the detailed environmental report has been sent to the Minister of the Environment, James Bradley, by the Lake Kashagawigamog Association, a newly-formed property owners' association.

Susan Mojgani, who deals with municipal sewer and water projects for the Ministry of the Environment, says the time involved in the process depends on the size of the project and the co-operation of involved parties.

Once the Minister has received the request for an individual environmental assessment, Mojgani says one of the ministry staff members is assigned to investigate the request. The investigation involves discussions with the municipality, the consultants, any opponents to the project and all relevant government agencies.

When the investigation is complete, the information is sent to the Minister's office for his decision.

Bradley may decide to instruct that an individual assessment be carried out, or he may send the matter to the Environmental Assessment Advisory Committee.

Mojgani says individual assessments are usually only carried out for very large projects, while smaller projects are dealt with by the advisory committee.

Although she is not familiar with the Dysart sewage plant expansion, Mojgani says it sounds as if it would be considered a small project and dealt with by the advisory committee.

The committee holds public hearings on the proposal and listens to submissions from any member of the public who wishes to make relevant comments, either for or against the project.

The committee then reports to the Minister who makes a final decision on the fate of the expansion.

The amount of time the process requires depends on the project and the willingness of the involved parties to give information, says Mojgani. In some cases she has known the initial investigation to "drag on for months and months."

John Puffer, president of the Lake Kashagawigamog Association, says it's not his intention to delay the sewage plant expansion unnecessarily. He says he hopes the whole matter can be dealt with expeditiously and address the association's concerns with the project without causing delays at the expense of the beneficiaries of the expansion.

In his letter to Bradley, Puffer says the association has studied the proposed expansion and studied the report compiled by Tottem, Sims and Hubicki.

"As a result of this research we are gravely concerned about this proposed expansion of the sewage treatment plant," says the letter.

Puffer says the concerns stem from the fact that the impact of the expansion is not really known and that there is a positive correlation between the installation of the existing treatment plant and the deterioraluters that require immediate corrective action, and 70 were given warnings.

"That may sound high, but it's consistent with other lakes," said Kapac. He advised the Kashagawigamog associations to start sending letters to the Ministry requesting testing in the near future.

The President of the Federation of Ontario Cottage Associations (FOCA), Jean Anthon, said her organization has been trying to get mandatory testing of septic systems but the idea was "rejected outright" by the Ministry of the Environment.

Because the testing procedure isn't mandatory, Anthon said cottagers are forced to rely on the ethics of real estate agents when purchasing a property with a septic system.

Ontario's Environment Minister James Bradley has said the current testing procedure is sufficient, but Anthon disagreed, saying, "an eight-year wait is not sufficient."

Mike Irwin, a member of the Kashagawigamog association's executive, gave a presentation on some of the initiatives being taken by the association to address environmental concerns.

He told the members that a third water quality monitoring station had been set up in the North Basin of the lake. The stations measure water clarity and algae growth.

Irwin outlined some of the ways individuals can minimize the impact their septic systems have on the lake environment. He suggested using plumber's anti-freeze to safeguard against frozen pipes during the winter. He said plumber's anti-freeze poses less danger to the environment and costs less than automotive anti-freeze. He stressed the importance of using soaps that have a low phosphorous content and not disposing of chemicals through septic systems.

"Don't underestimate the impact, you as an individual can have," said Irwin.

tion of the water quality in the Kashagawigamog Lake chain.

He says there is no assurances in the consultant's report that the expansion of the plant will not harm the lake environment.

Puffer also mentions that the north basin of Lake Kashagawigamog is covered under the Ministry of the Environment's Policy Two which states, "where new or expanded discharges are proposed, no further degradation (of water quality) will be permitted and all practical measures should be undertaken to upgrade water quality."

The proposed expansion, says Puffer, would appear to be in conflict with Policy Two because there will be an increase in phosphorous loading.

Other concerns addressed by Puffer in the letter include the possibility of strip development along Highway 121 once the sewer line extension is completed and Ministry of Natural Resources concerns about the potential impact on fisheries due to the plant expansion.

"Having considered all of the facts available to us and having knowledge of the very environmentally sensitive nature of our lake chain, we feel it would be a serious error in judgement to proceed with the expansion of the Haliburton sewage treatment plant as recommended in the Class Environmental Report and without further study," says Puffer's letter.

The deadline for submissions to the Ministry on the proposed expansion is September 15, after which the investigation into the request for the individual environmental assessment will commence.

Abandoned mines near Paudash a political problem

On September 7, 1989 a meeting of significance to local residents and cottagers took place in Bancroft. Sponsored jointly by the Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce and the Paudash Lake Conservation Association, the meeting dealt with two abandoned uranium minesites in the Bancroft/Paudash Lake area.

Both mines, Bicroft and Dyno ceased operations over 30 years ago and the absence of a monitored shut down or decommissioning has created considerable concerns among property owners and tourists in that area.

Participants at the meeting isolated two distinct but related problems. The most immediate issue related to remedial action to be undertaken, if necessary at the Bicroft and Dyno minesites to meet the health and safety standard established by the Atomic Energy

Control Board of Canada (AECB).

The more long-term, and equally important issues of establishing the jurisdictional responsibility of monitoring these two minesites in the future, is essentially a political problem to be resolved between the Federal and Ontario governments. Participants were informed that discussion regarding this issue are now ongoing between the two levels of government.

It was on the first issue that the most significant breakthrough was achieved.

The Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada (AECB) announced that the AECB will begin discussions within a month, with the owners of Bicroft and Dyno Mines to set in motion whatever remedial action was necessary to meet the health and safety standards of the AECB. The AECB stresses that this step was being undertaken with the full cooperation of the owners of the two minesites.

Progress of a more long term significance was announced by Madawaska Mines Ltd. Madawaska Mines Ltd. stated that they are prepared to register the title or to transfer the deed of the tailing ponds and adjacent properties, to a government agency to ensure that these lands will be registered in perpetuity and not be used for any future development.

The consultant to Lac Minerals (Owner of Bicroft Mines) supported the initiative of Madawaska Mines Ltd. and agreed to take this issue to his principals for approval.

The entire meeting was conducted in the spirit of co-operation. An understanding was reached that local residents must be kept informed and be involved in the decisions that affect them.

Meeting is postponed

Minden Minor Hockey meeting Friday, September 15 has been changed from the Minden Arena to the Minden Municipal Office, upstairs. Nesbitts combine to bring home 16 ribbons from CNE

It was another outstanding year at the Canadian National Exhibition for Sinc and Wyatt Nesbitt of Minden.

Sinc came home with a total of 14 ribbons from the Heavy Horse Show, including six firsts, five seconds and three thirds. Wyatt won two ribbons for showmanship, one a first place and the other a second.

The Nesbitts, who own Misty River Farms on Deep Bay Road are seasoned competitors at the CNE, consistently returning with strong results. This year, Sinc's registered Belgians won the following classes: Filly Foaled in 1987; Junior Champion Mare and Reserve; Stallion Foaled in 1987; Junior Champion Stallion and Reserve; Get of Sire, and Pair of Registered Mares.

His second place wins included: Brood Mare with Foal at Foot; Stallion Foaled in 1989; Grand Champion Stallion and Reserve; Stallion and Three Mares, and Two Horse Team, Light Draught.

Sinc earned third place finishes in the classes for Yeld Mare Four Years Old or Over, Two Horse Team Four Years Old or Younger, and Unicorn Hitch.

Wyatt Nesbitt won first place for Belgian Junior Showmanship and second place in the Junior Showmanship Championship.

Rally fizzles out

Strong speculations of another skinhead rally in Minden for the Labour Day weekend proved to be unfounded.

All was quiet at the home of Minden resident John Beattie, who had organized a previous rally on the Canada Day weekend. Similarly, there was little activity at Lansdowne Park in Ottawa, which was billed as the pick-up point for skinheads on Sept. 2.

Initially, a white supremacist rally was to be staged at a country home near Sherbrooke, Quebec. Posters, similar to those used for the Minden rally, were circulated in the Ottawa and Montreal areas inviting skinheads to the event.

However, when the parents of the teenaged girl who was to be the host of the rally discovered what was being planned, the location had to be changed.

A new set of leaflets was circulated which named Lansdowne Park as the "meeting place" to take participants to another, unnamed location. Since Beattie had hosted the earlier rally, journalists in Montreal were speculating that Minden was the most likely location for this rally.

"Because of a Jewish conspiracy," the new leaflets read, "we must change the place of our rally (initially in Sherbrooke). . . The Labour Day weekend is for white persons only (non-Jewish descent) It is for all nationalists who are concerned about keeping our land white."

However, the Labour Day rally fizzled out. According to reporters at Lansdowne Park on Saturday, only about a dozen local skinheads showed up. There were no buses or other means of transportation to take them anywhere. Some anti-skinhead demonstrators soon arrived and the skinheads immediately dispersed.

Later reports told of about 40 skinheads wandering the streets of Ottawa in small groups.

Beattie, the former leader of the Canadian Nazi Party, recently arrived back from a vacation in England, is still living at his rented property on Bobcaygeon Road. He has until the end of the month at that location, after which he will be moving further north on the road to rent from Jack Drew.

Early Beattie rallies prompt creation of organizations

The following is the conclusion of a two-part series chronicling the early days of William John Beattie, the former head of the Canadian Nazi party who now lives in Minden.

This account by Ben Kayfetz is reprinted with the permission of 'The Covenant.'

The Beattie experience prompted the birth of several organizations and the renewal of several, all for the purpose of stopping the neo-Nazis, with or without the leadership of the B'nai Brith-Congress committee or community relations. Of these, one was already in existence—the United Organizations for Histadrut, an umbrella group of landsmanshaften and mutual benefit societies for the purpose of raising funds for the various benefit causes of the Histadrut in Israel. Its executive secretary was Jacob Egit who had come from Poland in the late 1950s as a political refugee. Julius Ciechanowski had been incarcerated in turn by Hitler and Stalin.

As can be guessed, many of its members bore the scars of the Holocaust, emotionally and physically, and were not inclined to patiently tolerate anything bearing a Nazi label. Also in existence was the Association of Bergen-Belsen Survivors led by glazier Berel Laufer and tailor David Goldsilver, linked with the World Association of Bergen-Belsen Survivors.

A third group was the Montreal-based Association of Concentration Camp Survivors, whose leaders were Louis Zablow and Paul Goldstein. Its Toronto section was then headed by Sabina Citron. Its members were equally unlikely to show forbearance in dealing with neo-Nazis—an understandable attitude.

A fourth group consisting of high school students from Vaughan Road and Forest Hill Collegiates calling itself COIN, the Canadian Organization for the Indictment of Nazis, held a mass protest rally in May 1965. Their delegate to the Anti-Nazi Committee was Cyril Levitt, today a professor of sociology at McMaster University and the author of The Riot at Christie Pits, a study of the donnybrook between Nazi sympathizers and Jews in Toronto on August 16, 1933.

Most visible of the associations, and one born uniquely out of the events, was one with the unusual name of "N3, Fighters Against Racial Hatred" (Why N3? It was suggested by a young undergraduate who had been studying Newton's Third Law of physics, "for every action there must be an equal and corresponding opposite reaction.")

N3 was more heterogeneous in its composition. It was comprised of both Canadian-born militants, and veterans of the Nazi experience. Its first president was Charles Wittenberg, who had served in the French underground, receiving several decorations for his actions. Other members were Hungarians, Mike Berwald and Eugene Lawrence, jewellers Harvey Lister and Henry Kanarick, Reg Gilbert, Sam Pasternack, Mike Englishmen (a Jew of Dutch origin.) They published an organ called Shomrim (Guards), and for a while even boasted a ladies auxiliary. Most were also otherwise linked to the Jewish community through membership in the Wingate Branch of the Legion, various B'nai Brith lodges, synagogues, etc.

The Rhodes Avenue Neighbourhood Association was composed of people living in the East Toronto area, which Beattie had moved into and had presumed to set up his National Socialist "headquarters," who wanted him as far away as possible. It was non-Jewish in composition and participated in approaches to civic bodies.

It cannot be denied that there was some tension between the JCRC and these organizations (the Rhodes Avenue group excepted), who believed in militant, aggressive resistance and in confronting Beattie. There was an ongoing controversy in the community on how best to cope with the antics of the neo-Nazis. It should be kept in mind that most of this took place before the late 1960s, and taking public issues "to the street" was not yet accepted at all levels of the Jewish community. There was some resistance, not to anti-Nazi action, but to public confrontation that risked violence and added to the notoriety and self-importance of the agitators. It was also before the Leningrad Trials and other events of the 1970s when the Jewish community rose unanimously and spontaneously to the challenge and carried on mass demonstrations.

As early as 1965 the concept of an overall community anti-Nazi Committee was formed, comprising most of the militant elements who met regularly and made recommendations to the JCRC. Its first chairman was Max Schechter, and its first task was in January 1966, when it made a public protest against the growth of an ultra-rightist West German party led by Von Thadden. Six thousand people crowded the Coliseum to listen to federal labour minister Jean Marchand make a vigorous denunciation of fascism. Max Schechter led a vigil to the Shriners peace monument in Exhibition Park.

Ciechanowski and Egit, along with Sam Bierstone, became members of the B'nai Brith Congress JCRC, where, though at times in dissent, they were part of the decision-making process.

Later in the 1970s, in the early days of the Jewish Defence League, the late Albert Applebaum, a pharmacist and the JDL's first local leader, undertook to wean Beattie from his Nazi ways. He got as far as getting something of a public "recantation" from him, a statement that he was forswearing his pro-Nazi leanings and was even willing to act as informer to the public.

'Beattie's star had waned'

The confession was of brief duration; within less than a year Beattie was at it again, this time stressing the theme of British racial purity (Fascists in Canada and other Commonwealth lands have always had a problem juggling Anglo-Saxon racial chauvinism, which has little appeal to Anglo-Saxons, against the prospect of aid and numbers from German, Slavic or Baltic chauvinisms with which they have in common only anti-Semitism).

His new British Peoples League met monthly in a hall on the Danforth. But John Beattie's star had waned. Reports were that the meetings were attended by a dozen people, half of whom were official or unofficial observers.

His home on Woodbine Avenue at the time had a giant Union Jack festooned across the garage door. Throughout his entire "career" Beattie led a hand-to-mouth existence, cadging money here and there, frequently changing residences, constantly at odds with landlords eager to evict (not because of his politics, but for non-payment of rent), and regularly leaving behind a string of unpaid telephone bills.

For some years now he has been living in the Minden area where his second wife is employed as a nurse. His recent attempt at a come-back by means of the rally near Minden was a frustrated effort to pull himself out of his well-merited obscurity. Reprinted from "The Covenant."

The thing that goes the farthest

Toward making life worthwhile
That cost the least and does the most
Is just a pleasant smile.

May friendship and truth
Be with you in youth
And catnip and sage
Cheer up your old age.

When you get old and ugly
As friends sometimes do
Remember you have a

Who is old and ugly too.

I wish you all the smiles of

I wish you all the up of life
Without a single down.

May trouble follow you
All around the earth
But never catch up to you.

Rotary supplies dance bus

Once again this year, the Rotary Club of Minden will be sponsoring a bus to transport Minden and area high school students to and from dances at HHSS in Haliburton. This is the second year the club is offering this service. Club President Russ Paul said the increased interest last year has prompted the service organization to repeat the effort.

In co-operation with Todd Bus Lines, a bus will leave Minden on the evening of the dance, generally a Friday night, at 8:15 p.m. from the IGA parking lot. The bus will leave the HHSS at midnight, returning to the IGA parking lot between 12:20 and 12:30 a.m.

While the service club is sponsoring the bus service, riders are asked to pay a $1 per trip to assist in defraying the cost of the rental.

Rotary President Russ Paul said the club initiated the service at the suggestion of students and parents who said it was not always possible to secure private transportation to the high school for the dances. As well, the bus provides an alternate means of transportation which is safe and reliable. "Students today are concerned about drinking and driving," Paul said. "While we hope the need will not arise, passengers in a private vehicle where the driver has been consuming alcohol have the option of taking the bus back to Minden rather than risking a trip with an impaired driver."

The bus service also provides added convenience for parents who may be unable to drive to Haliburton twice in an evening.

The first night for the bus service will be next Friday, September 22, at 8:15 p.m.

Why write a will?

A good question and one which we usually put off considering until the last possible moment, as it were. If you have assets or personal belongings that you MAY want to be passed on to your loved ones, then you should have a will.

Don't have a will and leave behind you confusion and legal complexities that are simply not needed by your family and are also not necessary. You could also find that your valuables are distributed on the basis of law rather than your wishes.

NOW...nothing can replace the services of a lawyer in this regard, but the Haliburton County Public Library does have an interesting title called Wills for Ontario which will answer more of the more practical questions for you before you talk to your legal people.

For example: what exactly is a will? Can you revoke a will? Does your will have to cover your debts? What is probate and how do you go about it?

Before you see your lawyer, you want to have a full knowledge of what you are going to be talking about. This book can help.

Available at or through your local branch of the Haliburton County Public Library. Serving you since 1965.

Seniors enjoy delightful birthday treats

The Minden Lioness Club began the week by preparing a lovely lunch, serving the residents in the auditorium, and as it was the last Thursday in the month, they had a lovely birthday cake for those who had birthdays in August. Irene McKelvey was August 13, Isabel Avery August 16, and Violet Thornett was also August 16. Irene was the only birthday lady on hand since Isabel is bedfast and Violet is away. It was a delicious tea.

Tom McAllister called bingo in the evening, and we thank him.

Friday from 2 to 4 was Happy Hour with Bill Payne providing the entertainment. Hyland Crest residents thank him very much.

My niece Jacqueline Yateman from Peterborough took me on Friday morning to Wilda LaRue's cottage on Redstone Lake for the day.

Sunday, Rev. John Burgess took the chapel evening service which we appreciate greatly.

Ena Marion and her husband showed three movies: one was called "Early Pioneer Farmers on Lake Ontario". The second was "Heavy Horse Pull" and the third was "The Loon, The North and You". The second movie was about raising horses in Bancroft, Kinmount and Lindsay, and the Lindsay Fair.

Monday was Rev. John and Mary Burgess' 45th wedding anniversary. They and his mother, Lucy Burgess had their dinner together in the tuck shop. Mark had a delicious Anniversary cake for them and we all had a piece. The residents congratulate them and wish them the very best.

Hyland Crest wishes to thank Marylyne Hammond of Wilberforce for the gift of two kittens to the residents. They are grey and white and are really pretty.

Wednesday evening Pastor Murray held a service in the main lounge and we thank him very much.

Must heed changing economic climate

by Bill Scott, MP
Victoria-Haliburton

For the better part of this century, Canada has pinned its economic health to the vitality of its international trade. Today, this remains a safe policy; but we must pay attention to changes in our markets and our labour force if we are to maintain the standard of living to which we have become accustomed.

Thirty years ago, 40 per cent of our exports came from the resource sector. Two years ago, resource exports counted for just 22 per cent of our international trade. This trend is expected to continue as the international demand for value-added manufacturing and high technology builds.

What this signifies, among other things, are major changes in the Canadian workforce. If traditional resource industries assume a lower trade profile relative to high technology and manufacturing, we will have to ensure our labour force remains in step with these changes.

Already, the Mulroney

government has taken significant strides in this regard. This spring, Employment and Immigration Minister Barbara McDougall announced the Labour Force Development Strategy, a key element of which is an $800 million committee to skills enhancement and training. But while consultations between the federal government, the provinces, business and labour groups will help determine where best to spend these funds, problems remain.

For example, during the last three decades the Canadian labour pool has been constantly rejuvenated by young people entering the job market. During the 1970's, baby boomers entered the job market at a rate of 300,000 per year. But as the baby boom generation ages, the labour pool ages in kind, and this poses interesting questions for labour strategies.

Given the aging labour force, and given the trend toward more specialized manufacturing instead of primary resource extraction, to where do we dedicate limited job training resources? Is it safe to assume that adult re-training will, in future, take precedence over entry-level skills for first-time workers?

Another change in the Canadian labour scene that will require accommodation is the increasing number of women in the workforce. In fact, by the end of the century, women will comprise half of the Canadian workforce, up from the current 44 per cent.

In addition, many working women are or will be mothers. This complicates the equation somewhat; not only will labour strategists have to wrestle with issues like pay equity and equality of opportunity, but child care will also be a factor.

These are but a few of the challenges facing Canadian policy makers. But with a little creativity, it is certain the unique features of Canada's workforce can be used to bring Canadians security and prosperity as we move into the 21st century.

Introducing A Deal That Will Make A Believer Out Of You.

Take delivery of a new Polaris snowmobile before October 1, and we'll give you $300 worth of free Polaris clothes and accessories.

Make sure you hurry, though, because after October 1, the offer goes down to $200.

After November 1, it's $100. And after November 30, it disappears.

So come check out all sixteen Polaris sleds, from the legendary Indy 650 to the all-new WideTrak, a real workhorse featuring a 20-inch track.

Ask about StarCard, and our $149 extended warranty. We'll make a believer out of you.

The Times

9th Annual

AUTUMN OPEN
September 17

at Haliburton Highlands
Golf Club

In the spring of 1990, residents and visitors to the old dam on the Gull River at Elliott Falls will notice very little change of scene.

The walkway across the dam will be as before as will the canoe portage through the old power station. The water levels up and down stream will follow the same patterns as before and in fact it will take a second look to realize that there has been something added.

That something will be the restoration of the hydroelectric which supplied the old Raven Lake Portland Cement Company at the beginning of the century. This time, however, the power will be purchased by Ontario Hydro in its efforts to increase the supply of environmentally-friendly energy for the future.

The Cement Company ceased operations in 1914 but the power plant at Elliott Falls continued to produce power for villages as far afield as Kirkfield and Victoria Road until 1928 when the generators were sold to a mining company in Northern Ontario.

In 1931 the plant and the falls were purchased by Ontario Hydro but, in spite of the many moves to reactivate it, was never found to be economically viable. The site was taken over by the Ministry of Natural Resources in the 60's.

Now everything has changed. On September 5th of this year Elliott Falls Power Corporation which was set up by Ottawa Engineering Limited to develop the site, will start construction of a new hydroelectric plant. The work will be carried out by J.R.B. Construction Limited of Ottawa, North Steel of Ingoldsby and Brydges Mechanical of Arnprior and it is anticipated that power will again be flowing by late December.

The new plant has been designed to fit into the environment with minimal change. Canoers passing through the portage in the old powerhouse station will notice some new construction and observation windows through which the plant will be visible. It will also be visible from the surface when going toward the walkway across the dam.

Full information will be available on the history and operation of the plant and an attendant will be on duty throughout the summer months.

Local residents can expect little or no disruption during the construction.

Don't take measurement procedures for granted

When buying goods that have to be weighed or measured, you want to know that you're getting everything you pay for.

Under the Weights and Measures Act you can be reasonably confident you're getting fair measure, whether you're at the gas pump or the local grocery store.

That's because weighing and measuring devices used for trade must meet certain standards of accuracy. Inspectors from Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada regularly check these devices for accuracy and ensure that merchants are using them properly.

Commodities that are pre-packaged or bought and sold in bulk, and services that are provided on the basis of measure, such as packing and cartage, are also inspected periodically to ensure accurate measurement and pricing.

You can tell that inspectors have done their job by looking for a Weights and Measures sticker on weighing and measuring devices.

But you too can play a part in ensuring that what you buy is properly weighed. Check that the scale registers zero beforehand. If the item is in a container, verify that allowance has been made for the weight of the containers. You can do this by weighing the container separately and subtracting it from the total weight.

Don't take measurement procedures for granted. If you're in doubt, ask that your purchase be measured again or weighed on another scale. Speak to the manager or owner if you remain dissatisfied. If you're still not convinced you've received fair measurement, contact your nearest office of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada, Weights and Measures Division.

September 11 and 12 were very special days for Elizabeth and Richard Toy and Elizabeth and Martin Bridgman as they respectively celebrated their 25th and 50th wedding anniversaries. "WHERE THE ACTION IS"

Hyland Crest bus raffle huge success for your service

by Alan Thompson

The Haliburton County Fair was another successful one and interesting one. The Lions Talent Show had a good number of contestants participating and a large audience. It lasted longer than was expected. Fortunately the rain held off. This is an opportunity for young children to get experience appearing before an audience. Some are nervous, one forgot the words, however they try and it gives them experience.

A big thank you to Lion George Moulton and his committee for a job well done. The Lucky Draw to raise money for the new Hyland Crest Bus was very successful with all tickets being sold. Some days it was really hot standing outside stores selling tickets. A thank you also to Reeve Ray Moore, Jack Brezina, Bern Berry, Gerry Jordan and Garry McKnight for their help drawing the winning tickets. First was #1394, $1000, R. Lucas, Lindsay. Second was #1521, $750, John White, West Hill. Third was $500, #614, Reg. Hart, Minden. Fourth was $250, #582, Mary Tweedle, Orillia. Fifth was $100, #1131, Helen Donaldson, Minden.

Looking out the windows in the morning and living on the Gull River it is easy to see summer is almost over. There are a couple of trees turning color and the river banks are getting wider. Time to get in action for winter activities, one of which is the Santa Claus Parade. It's time for merchants and organizations to plan their floats and make it a good parade for the children.

Guides kept busy throughout the summer

Regular meetings of the 1st Minden Girl Guides came to a close in June but several activities involving the guides occurred during the summer months.

The girls were delighted when asked to serve tea for both the Flower Show and the Museum Committee. Debbie, Aimee and Brianne Mansfield were on hand to help on the opening night of the Flower Show. Four teams of two girls each—Amanda and Naomi Stephenson; Aimee and Brianne Mansfield; Sarah Johnson and Cassie Weyrich; Meaghan Obee and Shona Beattie—were on duty throughout Saturday and Sunday at the Haliburton Fall Fair in the Museum Committee tent serving tea.

To carry on the theme of community service, the leaders, Faith and Debbie, arranged to take seven girls to the CNE where they performed three hours of public service name tagging preschool children as they entered the grounds. The remainder of the day was ours to enjoy. Although we didn't see Sinclair Nesbitt's Belgians in the show ring, we did have a chance to chat with him and Mrs. Nesbitt and learn some of the background preparations.

Two of the guides enjoyed a pleasant time at camp during the summer. Ginny Adamson attended both Doe Lake Guide Camp (Provincial Camp) and Camp Adelaide (Division Camp). Amanda Stephenson also attended Doe Lake. Both girls came home with new ideas, new songs, more badgework completed and new friendships made.

We are all looking forward to starting up regular meetings again, beginning September 19. We shall be giving a warm welcome to all the Brownies who flew up into Guides last June and any other girls between the ages of 9 to 12 years wishing to share in fun, adventure, crafts and challenge. The Girl Guides meet every Tuesday evening from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Minden United Church. Registration fee for the year is $18.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSTON: In loving memory of my husband Ellwood who passed away suddenly September 12, 1985 and two sons Myles Ellwood who left us October 11, 1968 and Alvin Carl, January 16, 1964.

Please don't stand by our graves & weep,
We did not die, we are just asleep.
We love you so dearly, but your life must go on.
We are near you in your sorrow,
We are near you as you weep,
But please for us, don't be so sad and lonely, we did not die, we are just asleep.
When your earthly life is over And God needs for his keep your heart aches will be over and together we can sleep.

Sadly missed by wife Ruby and (Mom).

JOHNSTON: Ellwood, Myles and Alvin. In loving memory of our Dad and two brothers:

You left us suddenly, your thoughts unknown,
But left us so many memories we are proud to own.
So treasure them God, in your garden of rest,
For when on earth, they were all the best.

Sadly missed and dearly remembered by sons, brothers and sisters, Mervin, Glen, Shirley, Judy, Carolyne and Lynda.
